The managers of the Western Union Company in this city have received a number of applications for reinstatement from operators who went out on the strike, but they have not yet been acted upon. The managers say that they will not take back any of the strikers who have been guilty of violence or intimidation, and that they will not employ any who have been arrested and fined for such offenses. They say that they have plenty of men to fill the places of the strikers, and that they will not be compelled to take back any of the old men unless they apply for reinstatement within a few days. The strikers say that they will not apply for reinstatement, and that they will stand by the Brotherhood to the last. THE REPUBLICAN SPOILS POLICY.

It now appears that confusion, failing and dissatisfaction are not the only objects of the Presidential tour in the Northwest. As will be seen by THE TRIBUNE'S special dispatches from Fort Wadsworth, Wyo., printed in the last issue, the first step has been taken toward a definite Indian policy, which will permanently settle the relations of the Government toward the Sioux tribes by placing them under the control of citizens and dealing with them as such, instead of as tribes to treaties and forced to the methods of agents and agencies. Unquestionably considerations will have due consideration will attach also the transfer from the Interior to the War Department, the cessation of hostilities and the determination of the Government that the Indian shall hereafter quit roaming over the country, settle down to some peaceful pursuit, and earn his living like the whites, and the arrest of the one man who, regardless of the rights of the other, is to be kept, will not affect the new policy.

The record with the Indians of the Harrison administration was bad. Wanamaker, and Gen. Sheridan's policy was announced to them. The same sad mismanagement as to all the other tribes before Congress ended, in many of its provisions to include what had often been urged in THE TRIBUNE. It will be along with the reservations, agents, and agencies. It will insist on the other reforms, and need will be laid to personality. It is no more than just that the Indians should be [illegible] the [illegible] which is [illegible] from them, and this is to be provided for by the sending of bands, upon which the reserve will be paid [illegible] annuity as the form. The indorse to this arrangement will be obliged to labor for themselves, and they will have the reserves as their lands and the products of their [illegible] upon which to live. In this arrangement the present agents and control officers will be displaced with all their servants for influence. They will pass from the control of the Interior Department to that of the War Department, whose organization of men will be of a native sort, and the evil influences they will fall to the Government will be [illegible] of Southerners, while the Government will be to an excellent position to control them and look after them.

The Sioux of the Dakotas are classed by Indian Agent, who has had intimate knowledge of Indian civilization in the Northwest, as a race thoroughly worthless of Indian civilization. It has become convinced that the only satisfactory settlement of the question may be reached by placing the Sioux under the supervision of the War Department and treating them as hostile or prisoners of war. Therefore will become [illegible] pursuit

The Dual Libertine's Version of the Killing of Capt. Dick Slade Public.

A Remarkable Statement Written by Dublin a Guilty and Cheerless Conscience.

The Sufferings of a Spirited Family and Wronged Girl Chronicled with a Pen.

Tuscarora, Nv., Aug. 5.—[Special Correspondence of the Chicago Tribune.] Dublin, the assassin of Capt. Dick Slade, was executed in this city at 12 o'clock to-day. He was executed in the jail yard, in the presence of about 200 persons, and died without a struggle. After hanging the usual length of time the body was cut down and placed in a coffin. Dublin's last words were: "I am willing to die. I have no fear of death. I am innocent of the murder of Slade. I am willing to meet my God. I have no enemies. I forgive all my enemies, and hope they will forgive me. I have a wife and children in Illinois, and I want them to know that I died innocent. I have written a statement of the whole affair, which I want published. I have no more to say. Good-by, all." He then shook hands with the Sheriff and others present, and ascended the platform. He was then pinioned, and the black cap drawn over his face. The rope was then adjusted around his neck, and the drop fell. He died without a struggle. His neck was broken by the fall. The following is the statement referred to by Dublin:

TUSCARORA, Nv., Aug. 5.—To the Public: I am about to die for the killing of Capt. Dick Slade, and I wish to say a few words in explanation of the matter. I was born in Ohio, and left there when I was quite young. I was married in Illinois, and have a wife and children living there now. I have been a resident of Nevada Territory for about three years. I have been engaged in the business of mining, and have been pretty successful. I have been in Tuscarora about two years. I have been acquainted with Capt. Slade for about two years. I have been on friendly terms with him. I have been in his company frequently, and have been in his company on the day he was killed. I have been in his company on the day he was killed.
